INSTRUCTIONS:

The federal Fair Labor Standards Act ("FLSA") requires most employees to receive at least minimum wage and overtime pay at one and one-half the regular rate of pay for all hours worked over 40 during a workweek. The FLSA includes a variety of exemptions from minimum wage and overtime for certain employees. Below are factors used to evaluate some of the most common exemptions to the FLSA overtime rules. This document does not provide tests for all possible exemptions under the FLSA, only those that are most common. We recommend completing this form after reviewing the employee's current job description and consulting with the employee's supervisor. The full text of the exemption regulations is found in 29 CFR 541.

The most common FLSA exemption categories include: Professional, Administrative, Executive, Outside Sales, and Computer-Related. To qualify under any of these exemptions, all items must be checked in the affirmative for the respective exemption test.

SALARY REQUIREMENTS:

Typically, only salaried employees are eligible for executive, administrative, and professional exemptions. As of January 1, 2020, the salary threshold requirement is $684 per week minimum. Computer professionals must earn either $684 weekly OR an hourly rate of at least $27.63 to be eligible for an FLSA exemption. Employees who qualify for the outside salesperson exemption need not be paid any salary if their compensation is based solely on commission.
